Hello,

My name is Nancy Cronk and I am the owner of a sip and paint business called Sipping N' Painting Hampden. We offer art classes and have a beer and wine license.

I concur with those who think corkage fees are sensible. My bar is small and I do not have enough space for a large variety of beer and wine, as most of our regular customers are satisfied with the basics. Occasionally, however, we have private group events where the customers would like top-shelf wines, which I normally cannot stock due to space constraints. If I can offer them a corkage fee arrangement, they are happy to do business with us.

Additionally, our location in SE Denver is near the Jewish community, and we have had a number of requests for private events serving kosher wine. Again, I cannot maintain a wine stock with specialty wines, but with a corkage fee arrangement, I can provide their guests with the wine that is consistent with their religious restrictions.

Thank you for your consideration,

Nancy Cronk
